political opponent of Roosevelt, the politician or statesman, had "but little chance perhaps of being heard in this babel of voices."

He spoke of his personal liking for the President, as I said that although, after the manner of strong men, the President had pronounced virtues and glaring faults of character, he never had abused him nor had grown hysterical in admiration of him, but he had supported him when he was right and fought him "tooth and nail" when he was wrong. He believed that was the way the President wanted to be treated.

Only Democratic Ideas.

Only Democratic Ideas.

Mr. Clark spoke of the claim/ that President Roosevelt was better than his party, "which fact," he estimated, "easily could be without running any imminent danger of being translated after the manner of Elijah in a chariet of fire by reason of his goodness." But, he said, whatever the President's virtues or faults, he was not a Democrat. Occasionally, he said, the President, very much to the delight of Democrats and the confusion of Republicans, "appropriates or absorbs, borrows or selzes a Democratic idea, and from his high point of vanlage urges it with tremendous force," for, he said, the President obeyed to the letter at least one scriptural injunction: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

It was the heavy hand or "big stick" of the President, he declared, that had driven so many Republicans "pell-mell into the cave of Aduliam, where there is weeping and walling and gnashing of teeth and much profane swearing," and, he added, "so far as he has advocated Democratic ideas, so far as he has mauled wicked Republicans with his mailted fist or bumped them with his big stick, he has deserved the unstinted praise of all lovers of our country."

Still Dispenser of Pic. Still Dispenser of Pic.

No one knew, continued Mr. Clark, whether or not the President was a great man. He quoted from an old Sizes saying, "count no man happy till he is years. whether or not the President was a great man. He quoted from a old saying, "count no man happy till he is dead," and said if twas a safe and as sane rule to pronounce no man great until he was in his crave. "We have not the perception necessary to fix his status in history," he said, "and it is sheer folly to attempt it." Individually he wished the President well until March 4, 1908 where he hoped that the President well until March 4, 1908 where he hoped that the President well very be elected to a third ferm till the republic is on its last legg. The Republicans," he declared, "graw red in the face lauding the President to the skies, for he is, still the dispenser-in-chief of pie. A Republican statesman bereft of pie. A Republican statesman bereft of pie." A Republican statesman bereft of pie." asid he, "wash a speciacle to make the angels weep," but," he said, "when he saw Republicans trying to apotheosize him by mere if pservice," it seemed to him 'the lady doth protest too much."

Referring to the last campaign, Mr. Clark charged that "sundry Republican representatives" sought and obtained from the President "certificates of Republican managers of result, said Mr. Clark, that the President was induced to write "the famous letter," to help the hurt me all title bit by saying that the hurt me all little bit by saying that the hurt me a little bit by saying that the hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying that he hurt me a little bit by saying Charge Panle to Republicans.

Mr. Clark laid the recent financial isturbance at the door of the Republicans.

Mr. Hopburn, he said, had reacted the money stringency lightly when he intimated "it was not much f a panle, anyway."

Mr. Clark said reciting the bank althrees receiverships for railroads, losing down of mills, the men out of mployment, "We are asked to disclosing down of mills, the men out of mployment, "We are asked to disclosing down of mills, the men out of mployment, "We are asked to disclosing down of mills, the men out of mployment, "We are asked to disclosing down of mills, the men out of mployment, "We are asked to disclosing down of mills, the men out of mployment, "We are asked to disclosing the wideness of our sensos and abelieve that this was not much of a anic." He wished it were true, but, he celared, it was not. He quoted from nutterance of former Secretary of the reasury Shaw that the money stringency of 1967 was the worst the world were had witnessed, but, he said, Mr. Clark said: "In the impending conflict I summon every place of power, thereby restoring the banker and five residences were destroyed. Loss, $70,000. The cause of the fire is unknown.

In conclusion Mr. Clark said: "In the impending conflict I summon every because which all this broad land to service under the Democratic banner and for the more railroads. The entire business Section Burns. Williamson's Business Section Burns. The entire business section of this place was destroyed to-day by a fire that banner and for the hearts of the people that started in the Moose Hotel. Because of the fire is unknown.

He said that the Republican party "without money and without niggers" would be a pitiable sight. Senator Taylor Gets Letter From Virginian Which Puzzles Him.

[Frem Our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, February 13.—There is a Joke somewhere in this story;
Several weeks ago Senator "Bob" Taylor, of Tennessee, went to New York and delivered an address at the annual dinner of the Tennessee Society, of that city, One of the New York papers the Jollowing morning published a ploture of a lantern-jawed, tuberculosis-appearing individual, and labeled it Senator Robert Love Taylor. As a matter of fact it was not a picture of Senator Taylor,

A short time after the dinner Senator Taylor received a letter from a Mr. Kirkpatrick, of Rockbridge county, Va., saying he had seen the picture in the New York paper and the Senator bore such a close resemblance to some of the relatives of the writer of the letter that he had determined to claim kin with Senator Taylor.

"And he showed clearly that we are related," said Senator Taylor, "and I am proud to claim the kinship. But he hurt me a little bit by saying that picture had any traces of family likeness."

According to a program now being arranged by the Senate Republican ieaders a vote will be had on the bill in about two weeks. The indications are that there will not be a large number of Republican Senators to speak on the measure, and that the speeches by Democrats will be addressed chiefly to objections raised by individuals to certain features of the bill.

Senator Clay, of Georgia, expects to talk to-morrow. Senator Clarke, of Arkansas, will speak early next week and Senators Culberson, Teller, Daniel, and Scnators Culberson, Teller, Daniel, Tillman and Bailey will address the Senate within the next ten days.
